

High School Organizations are Starting Year's Work

A number of activities are to be noticed at the high school of the different organizations that are getting under way. The classes have all consumed their organizations and are holding their meetings, and other organizations are fast getting on working basis.

The two glee clubs are beginning to do some good work and considerable talent is shown among both the girls and boys. The girls' glee is a new organization and it has now about twenty members that are showing up some good work. Principal Redenbaugh has charge of it. The boys' glee club started off where it ended last year except that some of the members graduated. They have, however, a goodly number of new voices that are showing up well and the work of this organization will probably excel that of last year. They are holding their regular practices under the supervision of Mr. Flowers.

Urge Police Force to Pay More Attention to North Side

At the meeting of the city council Tuesday evening at the library building the matter of another policeman for the north side was taken up and widely discussed. It was decided that the city did not have sufficient funds to hire an extra man as they would like to do, but the present force was instructed to spend more time on the north side and to pay more attention to the needs of that part of the city.

An ordinance was passed by the body changing the center line on Ninth street between Maple and Pine to the old survey. This was done upon application of a number of the residents along that street for the reason that a number of them have already put in curbs and the changing of the line as per an ordinance passed some time ago would compel them to take out the curbing and put in new.

The fire committee was instructed to sell one of the hose carts to Hershey at a reasonable figure as it is not needed by the city with the new fire truck. The regular monthly bills were submitted and the bills were allowed. The largest one was for $4,000 to the Hershey Meter company for meters purchased.

Interesting Display of War Relics.

A interesting collection of war relics are on display at the Harcourt & Jensen store in their show windows. It shows a collection of old cartridges and shells that were picked up from the Spanish-American war by C. W. Likes of this city. There are two large three-inch shells that were fired during the war. One of them exploded and was dug out from twelve feet in the ground.

There is also a model of the destructive siege gun used in the present European war for the destruction of air ships. There are sabres, muskets and many other old relics. Among them is also a medal that was won by Julius Hoga's grand-father in the Franco-Prussian war in 1870-71.

Mrs. H. L. Cummings left Wednesday morning for her home in Laramie, Wyo., after a visit of two weeks in the city with Mr. and Mrs. Everett Boyd.

The Misses Frater entertained the Tillikum girls at their home on South Dewey street Tuesday evening. A pleasant evening was enjoyed with various social diversions and at the close nice refreshments were served.

Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Cressler left Tuesday evening for Denver, Salt Lake, Los Angeles, San Francisco and other points west where they will visit for the winter. They went with the intention of spending at least the winter and if they like the climate they may decide to make their home on the western coast.

What Would You Do?

There are many times when one man questions another's actions and motives. Men act differently under different circumstances. The question is, what would you do now if you had a severe cold? Could you do better than to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy? It is highly recommended by people who have used it for years and know its value. Mrs. O. E. Sargent, Peru, Ind., says, "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is worth its weight in gold and I take pleasure in recommending it." For sale by all dealers.

Little Jim

By M. QUAD

Copyright by Associated Literary Press.

There were five of us and a boy in the far western stage coach as it rolled over the rough roads in Dakota. We had been together for four days. We called the boy Jim because his father did. We had twenty miles to go to reach the terminus, and the hour was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon when the coach came to a sudden halt as it tolled uphill. Next moment the driver called to us:

"All you folks what don't want your heads blown off had better get down and line up. We've been stopped by a road agent!"

It seems cowardly when you read it, but to get down and submit to be robbed was the wisest thing to do under the circumstances. Little Jim was not a bit frightened. The boy had lined up beside his father. As the road agent looked down into his face the lad cried out:

"Why, it's Mr. Pelton—Mr. Pelton! Say, Mr. Pelton, I'm awfully glad to see you! Where've you been this long time?"

"So it's you, Jimmy?" laughed the robber as he held out his hands for a shake. "Well, you've been growing since I saw you last. It's a wonder you knew me at first sight."

"Oh, I used to like you so well I couldn't forget your face," replied the boy. "Are there robbers around, Mr. Pelton?" With gentle hand the man pushed the boy into line and then stepped back a pace or two. As he did so his face grew very sober, and I saw a flash in his black eyes I did not like. His voice was low and steady as he finally said:

"I'm much obliged for your promptness in climbing down and lining up, and I think I'll let you off this time. The four of you may get back into the stage and go on."

The colonel took his son by the hand and attempted to enter the stage with us, but the robber motioned him back.

At our disappearance the man turned on Colonel Weston and pointed to the hillside on the right and said:

"Move on that way, Jimmy, give me your hand and I'll help you along."

The white faced colonel entered the pines and held a straight course up the hill. Behind him came the robber and his son. The boy had been full of curiosity at first, but presently he was awed and frightened by the look cast upon his father. Two or three years before he and Mr. Pelton had been great friends. Mr. Pelton had been manager for his father. One day there had been a bitter quarrel, pistols had been drawn, the sheriff had rushed in, and Mr. Pelton had fled to escape arrest. He remembered his father calling the fugitive a thief and of men being sent out to hunt him down. All this came back to him as they followed the father up the rough way, and, though he knew nothing of man's vengeance, there was a feeling of dread in his soul. Now and then the robber ordered the colonel to the right or left, but those were the only words spoken until they finally reached a rude camp high among the bowlders. Even then nothing was said for a long five minutes. Each sat down to rest. They did not look at each other. By and by the robber half turned to look the colonel in the face and said:

"I've waited for this for two years. I could neither die nor go away until I had killed you!"

"It will be murder—cold blooded murder," replied the colonel as he folded his arms.

"If it was murder a hundred times over I'd do it. Do you suppose I can forget Rose Harper? Who separated us? Who maligned me? Who wrecked my life and sent her to a suicide's grave? Who drove me to be a fugitive from justice on a false charge? I'd kill you if a thousand men surrounded me!"

"Take the boy away first," said the colonel, with a touch of entreaty in his voice.

"Yes, that will be proper," answered Pelton. "Come, Jimmy, let's take a walk."

The boy crossed over to his father in a puzzled way, and the father lifted him up and kissed him. When he put him down he said to him:

"Run along, Jimmy. If you don't find me here when you come back Mr. Pelton will take care of you."

"Oh, yes! Mr. Pelton will take care of me and see that I get home," replied the lad. "I'm awfully glad to see him."

The lad started for his walk, whistling as he went, and his father stood erect with folded arms and faced the outlaw and death. He closed his eyes, and his lips moved. Presently he heard the click of a pistol and drew in his breath. Thus for a long minute, and then the man opened his eyes. Mr. Pelton sat with his hands over his face. When he dropped them there were tears in his eyes.

"I can't do it. Little Jim would know it some day. When he comes back take him and go down to the road. It's only three miles to Cedarville."

With that he walked off and was out of sight in a moment. When Little Jim returned he found his father sitting as he had left him and gazing into the woods.

"What is it, father?" he asked. "What's the matter with you, and—"

"—is Mr. Pelton?"

The man rose up slowly, took the boy's hand in his, and without a word in answer led the way down to the stage.
